

Vickie Johnston is a Financial Services Consultant with J.C. Wilson Associates specializing in investment banking and asset management searches.

After graduating from Harvard Business School in 1978, Vickie spent 12 years working on Wall Street in various corporate finance functions, in both public and private companies. Her experience includes roles with Kidder, Peabody & Co, Wertheim & Co., Morgan Stanley and Bankers Trust. In the mid-90s, Vickie worked as an independent corporate finance consultant in Hong Kong, where her projects ranged from raising capital to writing strategic business plans for various Asia-based companies.

Since relocating to San Francisco in 1997, Vickie has done pro bono consulting for non-profit institutions. She is a director of Community Partners, a group that teams Harvard Business School graduates with philanthropic projects in the Bay Area. Recent projects have included financial, marketing and strategic plans for San Francisco arts and civic organizations.

Vickie is a Trustee and City of San Francisco Commissioner for The Asian Art Museum. Her involvement has included capital raising, long-range financial planning; overseeing (as a committee member) the $180 million renovation of San Francisco's Old Main Library, the Museum's new home; and co-writing the Museum's 2004 Strategic Plan. Vickie has also chaired the Museum's Acquisitions Committee since 2000.

Vickie graduated from Stanford University with a degree in Economics, and holds an MBA from Harvard.
